Visual IT, a company headquartered in North Canton, is offering Managed IT services to small and medium-sized businesses in the city and at over 90 other locations across the country.

Managed IT services help businesses cut their own IT spending by relying on experts who remotely manage the infrastructure or offer scheduled on-site maintenance services. Managed IT service providers also help small businesses troubleshoot their systems if they are ever overwhelmed by common IT bottlenecks such as increased demand on resources, security breaches, or problems related to unresponsive hardware.

A spokesperson for Visual Edge IT talks about why businesses should consider opting for Managed IT services by saying, "Software has moved far beyond the simple desktop applications that used to be the backbone of small businesses just a decade ago. Today, with most software moving to a cloud-based delivery model, you either need to log into their servers to access your data or host the software and databases on your own servers. Though this sea change is beneficial for many reasons, such as data security and data redundancy, it also brings with it new and unique challenges that small business owners have to now contend with. Even if you rely on robust and thoroughly tested software suites such as those offered by the likes of Microsoft and Google, you still need to harden the machines on your premises against viruses and malware that can go as far as corrupting your data in the cloud. Moreover, you are also going to have to deal with the problems in your installed hardware that will undoubtedly get slower and more inefficient at running your cloud-based software with every passing year. The best way to manage your IT issues without investing a whole lot of money in an on-site IT team is to turn to Managed IT service providers like Visual Edge IT.
