IBUYSTL, a we buy houses St Louis company, has observed that home prices, which have been on the rise during the previous months, has finally slowed down in June 2022. According to an analytics firm that has been tracking this metric since the early 1970s, the annual rate price appreciation has dropped by two percentage points from 19.3 percent to 17.3 percent in June. Nevertheless, the price gains remain strong because the housing market has just emerged from a severe shortage for several years, with strong demand during the pandemic making the shortage worse.

Jimmy Vreeland, a representative for IBUYSTL, says, ?The slow down in home price gains can only mean one thing, and that is the supply is finally catching up with the demand. This implies that it is now a bit harder to sell a home compared to a few months ago. But you may want to avoid the traditional listing hassle or if you need really need to sell your house fast for any reason, we can provide you with a reasonable offer within 24 hours. If our offer makes sense, pick the closing date and start packing. And we really mean it when we say will buy houses in any condition. Whether it?s a total fixer-upper or in perfect condition, we want to buy your house. Any condition, any size, and in any situation, there?s no easier way to sell.?

Selling the home to IBUYSTL is different from the usual process of selling the property through a real estate agent. Specifically, they want to emphasize that home sellers won?t have the stress of: meeting realtors; making costly repairs; cleaning and staging the home; open houses and having strangers inside the home; considering buyer offers that are ridiculously low; and needing to pack up and move out of the home based on the schedule of the buyer.

There are many potential reasons why a homeowner would want to sell a home. They may be selling a house with code violations, they have nightmare tenants, they are undergoing divorce, they are affected by a job relocation, they have inherited a home, they have a problem with their home financing, they need cash fast, they want to avoid foreclosure, or their property requires expensive repairs.

IBUYSTL is a veteran-owned local company in St Louis, Missouri, that is ready to buy a house in any condition, which means the home seller does not have to spend time and money on repairs and in cleaning the property before selling it. Home sellers will also enjoy the benefit of not needing to shell out money to pay for the commissions of a real estate agent and for the closing costs. This means that the home seller will be receiving the actually amount quoted by the company without any deductions. And it is possible to close as early as within seven days or whatever schedule the home seller prefers. IBUYSTL has 15 years of buying properties and in buying homes in all kinds of conditions.

The buying procedure used by IBUYSTL has been made simple and only requires three simple steps. They want to emphasize that transparency is vital in order to obtain a favorable quote from IBUYSTL. Homeowners interested in selling their property can also call IBUYSTL on the phone.

When the home seller?s order is processed, they will schedule a visit to the home being sold. This is a physical inspection that will be conducted to find out if all of the information provided by the home seller is accurate. They will also find out what upgrade are required. This is typically done within 24 to 48 hours from first contact. After the physical inspection has been done, they will make a cash offer. This offer will be based on current real estate prices and house conditions. If the home seller agrees to the cash offer, the required documents will have to be signed and the deal will then be closed and the cash will be provided to the seller.
