Custom College Visits, a company that offers tailor-made college tour planning and personalized on-campus arrangements, has joined forces with Connected College Visits, a groundbreaking college tour app that is a partnership between Quad2Quad and SameGrain.

The company has announced that it will work closely with Connected College Visits to facilitate the connection on college campuses of students and parents with similar interests, concerns and questions, in an effort to make the college selection process easier for everyone involved.

Janice Caine, founder of Custom College Visits, states, "Our goal is to ensure that each family's experience is stress-free and that their trip will run smoothly. Teaming up with Connected College Visits will allow us to offer families the opportunity to enhance their visits by reaching out to others who will be visiting the same college campuses at the same time."

Custom College Visits will collaborate with Connected College Visits to better understand the issues that students face, and as stated by Anne Balduzzi, SameGrain's founder, "to alleviate some of the anxiety that comes with meeting new people on an unfamiliar campus."

Additionally, Custom College Visits will address significant issues faced by parents when visiting with their children, and work with Connected College Visits to offer them a platform to connect with like-minded parents.

SameGrain's sophisticated, proprietary matching algorithm connects people on more than 45 million match points. By downloading the free SameGrain app and entering the Connected College Visit invite code (CCV), both students and parents can anonymously discover others that have shared threads ranging from academics and sports to beliefs, health and lifestyle.

Those interested in learning more about the app can visit SamGrain on their official website, where they can learn how to download the app and get started.
