"The aftermath of an accident can be difficult to process," says Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. "In addition to any physical injuries, the shock of the incident can take some time to wear off, and many will find themselves unable to make the best decisions regarding their future in this state. This is why our team strongly urges you to seek professional help immediately. To begin with, you should see a medical professional to ensure any injuries receive the proper attention. Immediately following that, however, it is in your best interests to reach out to our office and alert us that you need our help. A fast response is crucial, and we are committed to getting our clients the representation they need as quickly as possible. If you are unable to come to us due to extensive injury, please let us know. If you are recovering in hospital or find yourself unable to safely leave your home, our attorneys can and will come to you. You are our priority."

One major reason the firm advises accident victims to contact an attorney so soon after their accident is that most other parties involved in the incident will not have the client's best interests in mind. This may even include the victim's own insurer, given that their need to maintain profits gives them an incentive to either deny lawful coverage or minimize their responsibility to their client (thereby reducing the amount of compensation they are willing to pay and so on). Even if a policy's outline appears to give the victim every right to compensation and/or financial assistance, the insurance adjustor may disagree. This can have drastic consequences in cases where the accident victim needs cash fast to make up for other shortcomings, such as medical bills, lost wages due to missed work and so on.

The firm points out that an injury that is significant enough can also change the victim's lifestyle and income potential ? potentially for the rest of their lives. Insurance firms understand the colossal value this can represent, and they may attempt to have the victim agree to a smaller amount than they are due (and need). The average individual is unlikely to be able to calculate the true cost of their circumstances, and insurers will count on such misconceptions and a victim's desperation for cash to make this lower figure seem feasible.

?Exercise your right to have your lawyer present before you make a statement,? says Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. ?If you have yet to obtain representation, inform anyone who approaches you that you will have your legal counsel get in touch with them at the earliest opportunity. Do not offer any details on the accident until you have consulted with us. Insurers and other parties may use your words to rule against you and deny you the coverage you need. Do not give them the opportunity to do so. Contact us immediately, and we will negotiate with them on your behalf.?

Clients who turn to Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. will find that the team has built a network of specialists who can help corroborate their testimony with legally admissible evidence. In addition to directing a client to trusted medical providers in the event they require further assistance, for instance, the firm has a working relationship with countless professionals who can examine any evidence pertaining to the accident. This will greatly contribute to a claim's chances of reaching a successful outcome.

Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. can be reached around the clock via their phone lines. Clients may also email the firm to inquire about their services, and Kenneth S. Nugent, P.C. can be found on several social media platforms as well.
