Seattle, Wash. ? For many travelers, purchasing souvenirs is a beloved pastime while on vacation. But for those who are about to set sail on an Alaskan cruise from a Seattle port, it can be difficult to find extra room inside suitcases and carry-on bags for mementos purchased pre-voyage. Of course, it can be even more cumbersome to try and squeeze in all the treasures that were acquired during the actual trip into luggage when there are weight limits at the airport. A shipping center in Seattle, WA has the ideal solution: providing premium packing and shipping services to travelers to mail their goods home.

Tourists frequently book a day or two in Seattle to sample the local culture before embarking on cruises. This typically leads to impulse buying, which causes these individuals to be faced with the issue of over-stuffing their luggage to accommodate souvenirs and possibly damaging them in the process. In fact, it is a normal occurrence for travelers to dock in Seattle and then embark on other adventures or simply fly home, leaving them with the need to relieve themselves of extra items before the next step of their trip.

This conundrum leaves many questioning what alternatives are available. The Mailbox Seattle is conveniently located less than 10 minutes from the main seaports where Alaskan cruise ships dock to pick up or drop off passengers. As such, the experienced staff can help customers ship their new purchases home, whether they need to utilize domestic or international shipping, and can even send delivery updates to said customers while they are at sea or in the air.

Margaret Choi, owner of The Mailbox Seattle, wants individuals visiting Seattle to know that they also have the option to utilize another convenient service at her store ? baggage storage. ?Did you arrive too early at your hotel, or do you have to check out of your hotel and still have too much time before heading to the airport? Stop dragging your heavy baggage all around the city! Bring them to us at The Mailbox Seattle and we can store them for you for an hour, half a day, or all day. And then go have fun in downtown Seattle where you can visit the Amazon Spheres, explore the Space Needle, or walk around Pike Place Market.?
