Towson Roofing Pros, a roofing company in Towson, MD, is pleased to announce that they are offering roof installation services for homes in the Anneslie Historic District in Towson. This is a residential community located just north of the city line of Baltimore in Towson. It is composed of a grid of five streets that extend towards the east from York Avenue and then south from Regester Avenue. Towson Roofing Pros is offering their expertise in various kinds of roofing, including metal roofing, asphalt shingle roofs, slate roofing, and more for homes in this Baltimore County community made up of approximately single-family brick and frame homes. Most of the homes in this community were built in the 1950s, while the properties located in the northern section were built in the 1920s and 1930s, in bungalow, cottage, and foursquare styles.

Among the usual types of roofs that they are capable of installing are asphalt shingle roofs. Asphalt shingles have been gaining in popularity in the Baltimore area because they tend to last longer compared to other choices including cedar and wood. Plus, they have a lower environmental impact compared to other types of roofing. They offer a wide range of choices for asphalt roofing and make sure that each customer understands all the possible options and make an informed decision on the most suitable choice for their home. Asphalt shingle roofs also offer the advantages of being affordable, attractive, and easy to maintain.

For property owners who prefer flat roofs, Towson Roofing Pros offers torch-down roofing or EPDM roofing, which are the most cost-effective and the best option for flat roofs. This kind of roofing makes use of asphalt rolled or modified bitumen that work in the same way as asphalt shingle roofs but are more compatible with flat or low-sloped roofs. While it doesn?t provide the same impact on the appearance of the properties, it does provide the same level of protection. Torch down roofing is provided with a UV-reflective coating that offers excellent insulation. In addition, it provides a water-impermeable barrier against rain and snow. EPDM roofing can also provide the same benefits because its overlapping seams ensure protection of the property even during heavy rainfalls. EPDM is made from highly durable synthetic rubber roofing membrane and is very strong and durable, and it has the ability to withstand extreme weather conditions.

It is also important to note that Towson Roofing Pros also provides roof inspections. Their 30 point roof inspections service is designed to identify any possible areas of concern while also providing information on the overall condition of the roof.

Founded in 2005, Towson Roofing Pros serves as a Baltimore roofing company that provides a broad range of roofing services for both residential and commercial buildings. They are committed to providing high quality service at a competitive price and they are always ready to offer free estimates for all roofing services. After a customer has requested an estimate, they will schedule a time for their estimator to pay a visit to the property. They will take the necessary measurements for the roof and create a detailed plan for the installation of a new metal roof, asphalt shingle roof, etc. And after making the necessary computations, they will present a written proposal to the customer, which will include details about the work to be done, the materials to be used, and the rates of labor and installation. And once the customer has agreed to the proposal, they will schedule the start of the roofing project. They offer their services throughout the Baltimore area, including Towson, Lutherville-Timonium, Cockeysville, Hampton, Carney, Parkville, Brooklandville, Pikesville, Owings Mills, Carney, Reisterstown, Yorktown, and the greater Baltimore area

Those who are in need of a roofer near me in Towson and the Baltimore area can check out the Towson Roofing Pros website or contact them through the telephone. They are open from 8:00 am to 6:00 pm, from Monday to Friday.
