

Hemp Industry Lobbies For 2023 Farm Bill Inclusion

September 16, 2022

September 16, 2022 -

Hemp Healix is providing information about the upcoming 2023 Farm Bill and is lobbying for changes that will benefit hemp producers. The company seeks to provide the best quality hemp-based products possible and believes that the 2023 Farm Bill should support domestic hemp farmers. The CBD industry is committed to working with lawmakers to make these changes a reality.

It has been well documented that hemp is one of the most versatile plants on the planet. Hemp can make over 25,000 products, including paper, textiles, biodegradable plastics, construction materials, and fuel. In recent years, however, hemp has become known for its CBD oil and cigarettes. People who enjoy CBD cigarettes find that they can get relief from various conditions such as anxiety, pain, and depression.

The fact that cigarettes are a natural way to help people feel better and do not contain nicotine or tobacco may appeal to people who smoke for medicinal purposes. This is why consideration in the 2023 Farm Bill could help hemp farmers grow more high-quality hemp and provide CBD consumers with better products.

Hemp is one of the oldest crops in the world, with evidence of its use dating back to 8,000 BC. CBD products and hemp producers are on the rise, and with the 2023 Farm Bill set to pass, the industry is only going to grow. In 2021, the CBD cigarette industry was worth $2.1 billion, with hemp production reaching over $1.5 billion. This is a considerable jump from the $220 million worth of CBD and $113 million of hemp produced in 2016. The ultimate goal is to get the 2023 Farm Bill to include protections for producing hemp products.

The 2023 Farm Bill provides some benefits for U.S. farmers. It is the most significant piece of legislation that significantly impacts every aspect of farmers' lives, including hemp farmers. The bill influences how, what, and how much farmers produce. A farm bill that includes the cannabis and hemp industry would benefit people who enjoy CBD products, but the industry needs more federal protection. The goal is to lobby for the new bill to include benefits for hemp farmers and CBD producers to ensure hemp and CBD products are safe and meet quality standards.

According to Jeff Wright of Hemp Healix, "The 2023 Farm Bill could be a huge step in the right direction for the CBD industry if it will provide support for domestic hemp farmers and ensure that CBD products are safe and meet quality standards. People who enjoy CBD products need better access to high-quality products."
