Fake Food Japan, a business operating out of Osaka, Japan, has recently added a slew of new products to their lineup. As a result, they now offer more than 1,500 different products in their store. These include fake food props, but also a variety of other things.

"We now have the largest selection of fake food props online," says Justin Hanus from Fake Food Japan. "We ship worldwide, which has helped us to build our business significantly. This is also why we have started adding other types of items to our collection and we look forward to hearing our customers' views on these."

The items that have been added include outlet plug covers, hair bands and hair clips, headbands, earrings, necklaces, smartphone stands, tablet stands, wall clocks, multi-purpose cases, small size replicas, mirrors, mini bowls, back scratchers, mintia cases and pencil and pen stands. All of these items feature fake food design. They compliment the existing range of products, including life size replicas, business card cases, USB flash drives, key chains, smartphone charms and more.

The customer database of Fake Food Japan is extensive and includes people looking for unusual gifts for their friends and families, but also businesses who look for unusual corporate gifts. The props also make excellent teaching aids and they can be used in television or movie sets, or to help art students. Finally, restaurant owners often purchase replicas to have a visual example of the food they serve.

The business encourages everyone to give them a Like on Facebook through <https://www.facebook.com/fakefoodjapan>. This is an opportunity to learn more about the products, to get involved in conversation with the company and to be kept up to date with new product developments or additions. The company has been in business for over 70 years and they have built a reputation as being the best food replica company in Japan, if not the world.

The company has also recently released an informational video on <https://www.youtube.com/user/FakeFoodJapan>. This shows people the production process of fake food. Additionally, it gives some great hints and tips to those who are looking at making their own fake food.
