Water damage may occur in a house or property because of various reasons. Rivers can overflow and cause flooding, pipes in the home can break, or toilets can crack. Water damage resulting from sewage backup or a rising river is worse because of the dirty water. The professional water damage contractors from Dry Star will examine the source of the water before deciding on the appropriate action to take. In most cases, working quickly is vital because the longer the fabrics, infrastructure, and valuable belongings are soaked in water, especially when the water is dirty, it may result in those items getting damaged beyond repair.

There is also the potential problem of mold and mildew. Mold and mildew thrive in damp places, which is why they are likely to grow in water damaged parts of the home or property. This is why it is essential to perform the water damage mitigation as quickly as possible. The water damage experts from Dry Star Restoration will start working on drying affected areas as quickly as possible to ensure that mold and mildew will not have a chance to grow inside the home.

Specifically, the flooring and drywall will be inspected closely. If dirty water is able to get into the pore spaces of these materials, it will be more difficult for them to dry out and prevent the growth of mold and mildew. The water damage experts will quickly evaluate these parts of the home and do their best to get them dried fast. This will also increase the chances of salvaging these parts of the home and allow the homeowner to save a significant amount of money.

Carpets and rugs will also need to be checked if they need to be replaced. Oftentimes, rugs and carpets will simply be replaced, particularly if they are waterlogged. Since they tend to hold on to odors much more easily, it makes more sense to remove them and replace them with new ones if they have been soaked in dirty water. On the other hand, if they got soaked in clean water, it may be possible to simply to get them dried and reuse them.
