November 17, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

To assist people in learning Christmas carols during the holidays, Jazz Singer Julie Gallaher, CEO of Get On The Map, has launched a new website that features complete lyrics for more than a 100 old and new Christmas holiday songs, along with their mp3s and videos. Julie says that celebrating Christmas with Christmas carols and dancing around to welcome the blessings makes it the best part of the year, and to make it more musical, she launched the new website in order to help people learn the songs and sing along this Christmas.

On the occasion, Julie said that Christmas holidays are the ones people enjoy most and Christmas carols and music adds the real charm to it. Now with this year's Christmas holidays just around the corner, people are all set to celebrate it with more enthusiasm and joy.

Talking about the website, learnyourchristmascarols.com, she said that the idea behind launching the website was to assist people in learning the Christmas carols and songs so that they can enjoy Christmas in a more musical way. She said that the website has over a hundred Christmas holiday songs that people can listen to in order to learn the lyrics and sing along. Complete lyrics to various new and old Christmas favorites have been added along with a few rare finds. Some of the holiday songs include Phil Spector's "Baby Please Come Home" and Louis Armstrong's "Christmas Night In Harlem," along with traditional favorites.

Talking about the work behind bringing these Christmas carols and their lyrics all together, she said that the team has worked hard to come up with the most popular Christmas holiday songs, and create a way to feature their lyrics on website. She said that they want to help people learn their favorite Christmas holiday songs and enjoy their holidays with music all around.

A Jazz singer herself, Julie Gallaher is also the CEO of Get On The Map and aims to spread the power of music all around. She stated that the website not just features the listed songs, but they are also adding new songs to it on daily basis during the holiday season.
