New York City false arrest lawyers Russ Kofman and Arthur Lebedin releases a new article (<https://www.lebedinkofman.com/practice-areas/civil-rights-litigation/false-arrest/>) explaining what is considered a legal arrest in New York. The lawyers mention that in New York, the "stop and frisk" policy allows law enforcement officers to stop and frisk individuals suspected of committing a crime. This policy usually ends up with a lot of people being arrested for no reason.

"If you were arrested and the arresting officer did not meet any of the above criteria, you should retain experienced legal representation as soon as possible. It is highly likely that your rights were violated, and a lawyer can help you hold the police accountable both legally and financially," the article from the New York City false arrest lawyers.

The lawyer explains that in New York, law enforcement may legally arrest an individual for four main reasons.

The first one is that the individual being arrested is interfering with another arrest or police investigation. The other reasons include that the police have a good reason to believe that the person is trying to flee a crime scene, that the individual committed a crime, and that the police officers have a valid arrest warrant.

Attorney Russ Kofman says that an arrest can be a costly, time-consuming, stressful, and frightening experience. Especially if the victim is someone who is completely innocent. It is important that someone who is arrested for no reason seek the help of an experienced false arrest attorney right away.

Defense attorney Arthur Lebedin adds that if it is proven that an individual was arrested for no reason, they may be able to recover compensation for damages. These damages include physical damages, punitive damages, economic, and emotional damages.

According to attorney Kofman, "It may seem intimidating to go up against a police department and hold law enforcement officers accountable for their illegal actions. However, with the assistance of a skilled law firm, the process is made much easier and more efficient."

Lastly, attorney Kofman emphasizes the importance of having a skilled lawyer if a person is arrested for no reason. An experienced lawyer may be able to help the defendant understand their rights and protect their freedom.
