Brooklyn medical malpractice lawyer Samantha Kucher (https://www.rrklawgroup.com/medical-malpractice-lawyer/) releases a new article explaining what constitutes medical malpractice in New York. The lawyer mentions that a patient has the right to put their trust in their doctor or another healthcare provider in charge of their well-being. Professionalism and standard care are something that the patient should expect from these healthcare providers. This is why when medical malpractice occurs, it is not usually just a mistake but a form of negligence.

According to the Brooklyn medical malpractice lawyer, ?When a healthcare provider does not abide by established rules of care and procedures when they diagnose, or while treating, testing, or following up with a patient, those errors may lead to injuries, medical complications, or even death. In New York, this may be known as malpractice.?

The lawyer explains that medical malpractice or medical negligence refers to when a healthcare provider does not meet the standards and norms of their profession. A healthcare professional?s negligence can end up in an injury or sometimes, death. Any victim of such negligence deserves to be compensated for the injuries they suffered, or for the loss of a loved one.

Attorney Samantha Kucher adds that patients see a healthcare provider in order to be cured, not to incur more injuries as a result of the visit. The victim may be able to file a lawsuit for medical malpractice if they end up being injured because of the negligent medical provider.

In the article, attorney Samantha Kucher says, ?Although most people think that medical malpractice happens infrequently, a 2016 study conducted by Johns Hopkins University reported otherwise. They found that healthcare and medical errors were the third leading cause of death in the United States.?

Lastly, attorney Samantha Kucher emphasizes that it?s very important for a victim of medical malpractice to step out and report any kind of negligence that was done against them. Having a skilled lawyer may be able to help the victim receive the compensation they deserve.
