TomCoxLaw.com illustrates that millions of Californians waste roughly $30,000 dollars when they die!

If you live in California and die without a will, it's called intestate succession. The Probate Court will apply a set of laws to determine who inherits your property. With a will, you name your beneficiaries, but your estate must still go through the same Probate Court process.

What's the problem with Probate? It's lengthy, expensive and every private detail about your family is made public. In fact, it can cost up to $30,000.

Wouldn't you rather have that $30,000 go to your son/daughter or grandchild's college tuition, wedding or first-time home purchase?

You see, there are mandatory Probate fees set by the state as defined in the California Probate Code. What I discovered is that most people think these Probate fees go to the State of California. Wrong! They are actually attorney fees.

Furthermore, probate can take up to 2 years and all of your family's "dirty laundry" is made public.

Fortunately, there's a solution. A California Living Trust can solve this Probate problem so you can pocket the $30,000. In fact, a living trust in California can completely eliminate probate.

Tom Cox has written a new book called "The California Living Trust Handbook". It's available for free for a limited time on his website. The book also comes with a companion questionnaire and in less than 5 minutes, you can complete a California living trust and save your family $30,000.

Those who are interested in a California Living Trust are encouraged to contact TomCoxLaw.com for more information. A visit to the website will assist in gathering more information on videos, pricing, special coupons and deals, and revocable California Living Trusts, along with information specific to funding the California Living Trust and preparing transfer grant deeds in all 58 California Counties.
