With over five decades of combined experience, Zide Siegel Tabor & Spigel boasts a team of top attorneys who provide high quality family law, bankruptcy and criminal legal services.

Marla Zide from Zide Siegel Tabor & Spiegel says, ?Divorce is a difficult topic in any family, and it is one of the most sensitive areas of family law. Depending on the nature of the family, if there is to be a divorce, it can involve many moving parts, including but not limited to child custody, property division and spousal support matters. With such sensitive factors in play, you need to know that you are working with experienced divorce attorneys. We are proud to say that the team at Zide Siegel Tabor & Spiegel have handled every aspect of family law and divorce cases over their careers, and we are able to help you as you navigate the perilous waters of divorce law.?

As the law firm explains, under Maryland law, the definition of marriage is a civil contract between two people, and a divorce is a legal ending of a marriage ordered by a court. In this state, there are two types of divorce cases: absolute divorce and limited divorce. The former is a permanent end to the marriage, and should the court grant an absolute divorce, the final order of the divorce is set for a ?divorce? decree. A limited divorce on the other hand acts as a legal separation and does not immediately end the marriage.

The statutory requirements a married couple must meet to obtain an absolute divorce or limited divorce are defined in Maryland Family Law Code § 7-103. There are seven grounds for absolute divorce as defined in the law, and they are twelve month separation, mutual consent, adultery, cruelty of treatment, desertion, insanity and incarceration. These grounds ? and only these grounds ? qualify a married couple for absolute divorce. Once a decree of absolute divorce is entered, either party may remarry.

A limited divorce (also known as legal separation) is a legal action where a married couple is separated.

During this time, the couple remains legally married while living separate and apart from one another. If either spouse has sexual relations with another person during this period, it would count as adultery in the eyes of the court. Limited divorces are not a requirement in Maryland, but they do have some set grounds, which are separation, desertion, cruel treatment and excessively vicious conduct. A divorce attorney may recommend this route if the grounds for absolute divorce have not been met, either one of the couple is in need of financial relief, or they are unable to settle their difference privately.

Zide says, ?Without a doubt, divorces are tenuous proceedings. Necessary though they may be, they have earned the reputation of being traumatizing family law experience, leading to bitter custody battles. This means that you need the best support by your side to ensure you get the best results. That?s us. If you have concerns at all, feel free to call us today to schedule a consultation and discuss your situation. We offer in-person and over-the-phone consultations for your convenience.?

Zide Siegel Tabor & Spigel work has earned the Maryland divorce attorney a sterling reputation in the communities they serve. Molly C. writes in her review, ?Marla and team were very patient and communicative with me throughout a long and difficult case. Marla paid meticulous attention to details and helped bring the case to an optimal outcome. She is completely professional and genuinely interested in trying to help her clients. I highly recommend her to anyone who has a case in her area of expertise!?

In another review, Jenna L. says, ?If you are going to trial in a family law matter, you will want Marla Zide and her team by your side. She always made me feel at ease during the most stressful times because she was well prepared, confident and effective. Marla was successful at two custody trials and an en banc appeal during several years of complicated litigation. The outcome could not have been better! An amazing trial attorney with high integrity ? that's Marla!?
