JACKSON HEIGHTS, NY - October 20, 2022 -
New York City construction accident lawyer Keetick L. Sanchez (https://accidentlawyer-queens.com/what-are-the-most-common-causes-of-injuries-on-a-construction-site-in-new-york/) releases a new article discussing the common cause of construction accidents in New York. The lawyer mentions that construction accidents can be very dangerous for workers because they work in an inherently unstable environment.

According to the New York City construction accident lawyer, ?Due to unstable conditions that are common in construction zones, injuries received from accidents occur more severely than usual and commonly result in fatalities because of how quickly they happen. If you are dealing with a construction injury, the advice of a construction accident lawyer can be crucial.?

The lawyer explains that construction sites put workers at risk every day. There can be various causes of construction accidents and these include: falls, falling debris, electrocution, explosions or burns, slip and falls, machinery accidents, getting trapped in/between materials, collapses, vehicle crashes, and overexertion.

Attorney Keetick L. Sanchez says that it can be very dangerous for workers to work from a high place on a construction site. A third of all construction accidents are caused by falling inside a site.

Additionally, electrocutions, explosions, and burns can result from the uncompleted wiring work inside the construction site. Since the electrical work is not yet done, it can pose a danger to the workers. Slips and falls are also common in construction sites because of all the tools lying around, the lawyer says in the blog post. Attorney Sanchez also mentions that when it rains, the floor can be slippery and pose a risk of falling for the workers on the site.

?Many injuries are common on construction sites, and even those who take every measure to avoid injury may still be injured,? says the construction accident lawyer. She also emphasizes how important it is to seek the help of an experienced construction accident lawyer if someone is involved in a construction accident. A skilled attorney may be able to help the victim seek compensation for their injuries.

Lastly, the lawyer emphasizes the importance of having a skilled construction accident lawyer if they have been injured in a construction site accident. Having an experienced attorney may be able to help the victim receive the compensation that they deserve for the injuries they suffered.
