December 23, 2022 -

The highly-rated roofing company in Towson, Maryland, Towson Roofing Pros is helping the city?s homeowners pick the best type of shingles to install on their roofs. The company is educating Greater Baltimore area residents about the several different types of shingles available and their wide range of features at a range of price points to fit any budget.

Towson Roofing Pros gives its customers onsite estimates with three shingle options ? 3-tab standard shingles, 3-tab AR shingles, and architectural shingles. The first two types of shingles, recommended by Towson Roofing Pros, are made of asphalt, the most popular type of roofing material for manufacturing shingles in the United States. The use of asphalt in the shingles makes them waterproof. They are widely used because of their affordability and ease of installation which reduces the amount of time and, consequently, the money required for installation and repair.

Towson Roofing Pros offers two types of 3-tab asphalt shingles for roof installation and roof repair in Towson

MD - AR and non-AR asphalt shingles. AR stands for algae resistance. AR shingles ward off the growth of mold and mildew making them more likely to retain their look and appeal for several years after installation. The shingles are made algae-resistant due to a combination of copper and zinc used in their manufacturing. The shingles resist the growth of 70% of most organic matter and fight off the black streaks that are typically found on homes with non-AR asphalt shingles located in areas of high humidity.

The 20-year 3-tab standard shingles are the thinnest grade shingles available. They are widely considered to be builder-grade shingles and offer a lifespan of about 20 years. The 25-year 3-tab AR shingles look identical to the standard shingles but are a little thicker due to the special formulation that makes them algae-resistant. The AR shingles also offer better wind resistance due to their enhanced thickness.

Finally, Towson Roofing Pros recommends the 30-year AR dimensional (architectural) shingles to customers who want the best look and durability for their property?s roof and are ready to factor that increased cost into their budget. Architectural shingles have a laminate layer that adds strength and makes them mimic the aesthetics of more expensive kinds of roofing materials such as wood shake or cedar shake shingles. Architectural shingles are also offered in a wide variety of styles that gives homeowners many more design options.

The spokesperson for Towson Roofing Pros talks about the many shingle options offered by the Maryland roofing company by saying, ?If you are building a new home or are looking at a complete roof replacement, we can help you pick the right type of shingle that will fit within your budget and help you achieve the aesthetic that you want for your property. We also use the highest quality long-lasting roofing materials from reputed roofing manufacturers who offer industry-standard warranties. If asphalt shingled roofing is not the right fit for your property, we can also help install other roofing materials such as concrete and metal. Our crew of licensed and insured roofing technicians has worked on every type of roofing material imaginable and they bring this wealth of experience to the table every single day for our Maryland customers. We have an excellent track record of finishing our work on time and within the promised estimates. Please browse through the many testimonials we have received from our clients in the Greater Baltimore area on our website or our Google Business Profile to read what they are saying about our work quality and customer service.?
