October 31, 2022 -
Suffolk County DWI lawyer Jason Bassett (https://jbassettlaw.com/is-it-worth-fighting-a-dwi-in-new-york/) releases a new article explaining how to build a defense against a DWI. The lawyer mentions that driving is society?s easiest and most convenient means of transportation. Because there are a lot of drivers on the road, drivers have to be as careful as possible. The laws for DWI on Long Island are very strict and the punishments can be life-changing.

According to the Suffolk County DWI lawyer, ?Once a DWI report is submitted, the offense goes into the hands of the District Attorney. The District Attorney is only able to make decisions based on the information given in the report. There are policies put in place that determine the severity of the charge that is based on the results of the reported BAC. For instance, in Nassau and Suffolk County, if BAC is between .05% and .07% it may not be considered a criminal offense but rather an infraction that could still involve consequences such as fines, license suspension, and in some cases even jail time.?

The lawyer explains that there are many different ways to approach building a defense that can potentially reduce or drop the charges of a DWI on Long Island. Most evidence gathered for a DWI charge is based on subjective tests, and these tests may be contested. The defense lawyer may also use legal technicalities in the report to help their client receive a more favorable outcome.

Attorney Jason Bassett adds that there is never a guarantee when it comes to a defense case. However, it doesn?t mean that the defendant will not have any chance at protecting their future. It is important that anyone who is facing DWI charges seek the help of an experienced attorney.

In the article, the lawyer says, ?What is going to be important when it comes to finding counsel for a DWI offense is to thoroughly do your research. Choosing an attorney is an important decision and every case and every client is unique in its own way. It?s our recommendation to choose an attorney that will dedicate their time and attention to understanding the details of your case and who will strive for an outcome that will be within your best interest.?

Lastly, DWI attorney Jason Bassett says that the courts can also look at other factors when deciding on a possible jail sentence. This can include whether there were other passengers in the vehicle (if an accident occurs) and whether there are children involved.
