Brooklyn premises liability attorney Samantha Kucher (https://www.rrklawgroup.com/brooklyn-premises-liability-lawyer/) releases a new article explaining the Premises Liability Laws in New York. The lawyer mentions that no one really anticipates being hurt when visiting a shop, restaurant, or another commercial establishment. However, some negligent property owners overlook hazards that could be easily prevented and this negligence can sometimes result in injuries.

According to the Brooklyn premises liability attorney, ?Every year, innocent victims get injured as a result of property owners failing to take steps to address hazards around their properties. Premises Liability Laws in New York establish important guidelines in order to protect victims of such accidents. If these guidelines are not followed, you may be hurt, and the property owner may have to face the consequences of their negligence.?

The lawyer explains that New York?s Premises Liability Laws state that property owners and managers have a duty to protect patrons and guests from potential hazards. In order to help establish liability, seeking the legal representation of an experienced Brooklyn attorney is very important.

Attorney Samantha Kucher says that if the property owner or manager is found to have caused or ignored an unsafe situation, they may be held liable for any injuries that occurred on the property. Also, according to the National Floor Safety Institute, falls are responsible for approximately one million visits to emergency rooms every year.

In the article, attorney Kucher explains, ?A slip-and-fall accident is not the only source of premises liability claims. Structural problems can also be dangerous. Broken stairs, defective elevators, and loose handrails are all examples of structural defects. Property owners are required to provide protection to visitors and tenants against injuries from any known hazard.?

Lastly, personal injury lawyer Samantha Kucher emphasizes how important it is to seek the help of a premises liability lawyer if someone has been injured due to a property owner?s negligence. Having an experienced lawyer may help the victim seek compensation for the injuries they suffered after the accident.
