November 19, 2015 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Seattle based expert web design service providers Fannit Marketing Services recently announced and launched their new website getseattlewebdesign.com in order to provide their unique "growth driven web design" services for businesses who want to optimize their websites and attract more clients.

The internet has provided an easy to access online platform for consumers and has forced businesses of today to find their consumers online as opposed to more traditional offline advertising. However, advertising through technology is not easy. The day to day technological user interface advancements, like a desktop to laptop to tablets to mobiles etc, prove that people are constantly changing how they find the businesses online. This makes the importance of a well designed, supported and responsive website for a business an absolute necessity to attract more customers. On average, Fannit Marketing Services finds that their client's experience 37% of their web traffic comes from mobile devices.

The expert web design professional Fannit Marketing Services has been successfully making such websites for businesses and now has launched a new website of their own to make it easier people who are looking for "growth driven design" to get in contact with them.

On the launch of their new website, Keith Eneix, representing Fannit Marketing Services said that the professionals at the company understands the importance of a well designed website for their clients and are passionate about their work. "Many people determine the reliability and capability of a business within seconds of viewing a page of their website," he said that while emphasizing the importance of a well-designed website for businesses. He also said that their new website has been launched to spread the news of their services to the clients so that they can benefit from "growth driven web design".

He also mentioned the services of Fannit Marketing Services and said that the company experts provide their clients with websites which are highly responsive and adjust accordingly as per the screen size of the platform they're being used from, a laptop, tablet or mobile, anything. He said this allows the easy navigation and access from any device thereby attracting more consumers.

He further added to the list of website features that they offer and said that their websites are not complex looking but simple yet effective, so that people don't feel perplexed by it and convert at a higher rate. Further, as reported, their websites are made scrollable rather than making the customers click multiple times to navigate. He said that their websites allow pictures and videos to be added to make them more attractive.

"We understand what a person visiting a website expects of it and we provide better than that," said Keith. With their expert services getting rave reviews from their expert clients, the launch of their new website has made them easier to reach for their clients and is being seen as a positive attempt for further success of "growth driven design".
