

Sydney Conveyancer Extends Operating Hours To Improve Customer Service

November 17, 2022

November 17, 2022 -
LEAD Conveyancing Sydney, a conveyancing law firm based in NSW, decided to extend their work hours to accept more clients weekly. The never-ending demand for property conveyancing in the suburb and New South Wales drove the company to expand its operations until Saturday. For more information about LEAD Conveyancing Sydney, visit their official website.

Expanding its operations into six days was one of the previous plans of the company that was always put aside because of other significant matters. The head of the company noticed the constant increase in the number of people that seek the help of conveyancing firms, and more suburb residents and foreign people buy all kinds of properties weekly.

The Saturday operations of the company are from 9 am to 5 pm, 1-hour later compared to its weekday hours. The reason behind the 1-hour late operating hour is to give each member time to take a long rest. In addition, they also adjusted their Friday working hours from 8 am to 7 pm, and the previous Friday's working hours were from 8 am to 8 pm.

Sherry Chen, the Senior Lawyer of LEAD Conveyancing Sydney, talked about trying their best to keep a work-life balance despite expanding their operations. "Having this kind of setup is a big adjustment for everyone. We like shopping or doing what we want during the 2-day weekend, but we also love helping people. On this new setup, it is okay if one of us does not feel well to be able to work on Saturday. Just tell us upfront, and we will allow everyone to take an immediate leave. Before we can help other people, we need to help ourselves first. Taking care of our physical, mental and emotional health is one of the important things to keep our company going."

Conveyancing is a legal process of transferring real estate property ownership from one person to another, a complicated and stressful task for ordinary people. The procedure can take weeks or months on a case-by-case basis, and a non-standard contract will take longer than a standard one.

LEAD Conveyancing Sydney is a fully licensed conveyancing company in Sydney that serves people in the suburb and across NSW. Their office is located precisely at Level 36, Governor Phillip Tower, 1 Farrer PI, Sydney NSW 2000, Australia. Their customer service operates 24 hours daily so that anyone can contact them anytime.

The company offers all kinds of property conveyancing, such as buyers' conveyancing, sellers' conveyancing and transfer conveyancing, with the addition of contract review and drafting. All of their legal services are available at a fixed rate, and the fixed rate is based on their professional labour, transaction cost and level of expertise. The detailed breakdown of the costs of each service they offer can be determined using their free online conveyancing fee calculator on their official website. For people who want to have further details about the company's range of services and operations across Australia, visit the official LEAD Conveyancing Sydney website.
