The business's fire damage restoration services are in high demand as well. Even though fires can be harmful to both homes and businesses, not all of them result in complete destruction. The team of fire damage restoration experts at Elevate Restore can assess the contents of a customer's property within the impacted area to determine what may be salvaged and what would need to be replaced. Each item will undergo a thorough inspection before the best restoration method is chosen. The team will modify their cleaning plan and, if necessary, make off-site repairs depending on the material and state of each item. They can also help customers communicate with insurance companies to ensure that any damages are compensated.

Typically, the team will consider the price of replacement, the sentimental worth and the value of any antiques. The company follows all OSHA safety guidelines and restoration best practices, including those set forth by the IICRC, in order to complete the operation successfully.
