Custom College Visits, a San Francisco Bay Area company, is happy to have received numerous positive reviews from busy parents of college-bound teens, and their website has been updated to showcase the reviews to help other parents understand the importance and positive impact of a well-planned, customized college tour.

The business aims to help prospective students find the colleges that best fit with their academic and lifestyle interests by arranging meetings and activities that allow them to interact with specific people and places on each college campus.

"The college search process is stressful for everybody concerned," says Janice Caine Founder of Custom College Visits. "These days it has become more competitive and time consuming than ever and it can be exacerbated when both parents work or have busy, hectic lifestyles?it can be difficult to find the time necessary to help teens do the preparation needed to make the right decisions. This is where Custom College Visits comes in, and we're happy to receive the positive feedback from the parents we've worked with. These success stories are truly why we love what we do!"

In their reviews, parents have discussed how grateful they are to Janice for asking the right questions of their children and using the answers to help them understand the criteria that will help them build their college lists. Sometimes this means that a student may end up going somewhere that they might not have considered when they started the process. "My son has chosen to attend The Ohio State University," says mother Diane from Southern California, "a big school that he would never have applied to or fallen in love with, had it not been for the amazing professors and students he had the opportunity to meet when visiting."

Janice Caine states that they are excited about starting to work with families on their college tours for 2016.
