Golden, Colorado-based Roper Roofing & Solar has established a reputation for being one of the best all-around home exterior services providers in Denver and the surrounding areas. The company has accomplished this by having well-trained technicians on its crews, providing superior customer service, and using only high-quality products. A big part of the latter is they use such reputable products as GAF's Timberline Solar Shingles. This product is getting such rave reviews from the company's customers and others that have installed it, Roper Roofing & Solar decided to make it the subject of a recent blog post.

This new blog article the company posted is titled "Why Are Solar Energy Supporters Praising GAF's Timberline Solar Shingles?" This blog started by stating that while Tesla's venture into the home solar market was innovative, it lacked the necessary support to make it practical in many locations. That's why GAF's entry into the solar shingle market with its Timberline Solar Shingle proved to be such a game changer. This is because it's a 20 to 24% efficient solar energy collecting system that was much easier to install and support than Tesla's solar product. The article mentioned that while GAF's Timberline Solar Shingles do not closely mimic the look of traditional asphalt shingles, they were a big improvement over the other types of rooftop solar systems that are available now. They were even good enough to be recently named the "Best Solar Tiles for Reliability" by Green Builder Media.

The blog also pointed out some of the other features that make GAF Timberline Solar Shingles a popular choice. This includes their decent size dimensions which make them easy to put down, their excellent 45-watt energy production rating, the 25-year warranty they come with, and the fact that they have a more streamlined look than other current solar roofing applications. Brent Roper, the owner of Roper Roofing & Solar, says that they are very pleased to post blogs that help those in the Denver and Golden, Colorado areas make important roofing and solar-related decisions. He also talked about the wide variety of exterior home improvement services that the company offers at its Colorado area location. This includes doing residential roof repairs and quality whole roof replacements. They also handle such commercial roofing work as installing new EPDM, PVC, TPO, and torched-down flat roof coverings. The company owner also mentioned that some of the other reputable exterior services that Roper Roofing & Solar does well includes siding replacement & repairs, gutter & downspout repairs and installations, window installation services, and storm damage repairs.

In addition to providing quality roofing and exterior services and posting many helpful blogs on roofing and solar topics, Roper Roofing & Solar has worked hard to become one of the highest-rated roofing and solar companies in the entire Midwest. Reviews such as the following show why Roper Roofing & Solar has become such a popular choice for exterior home services in Denver and the surrounding areas. Pam Carlstrom stated, "I had a great experience with Roper Roofing! They were professional, on time, educational and trustworthy. We worked with John and were very happy with our experience overall. I would recommend them to any of my family and friends that need roofing work or solar services done for them. Thanks for the hard work!"

Andy Dutlinger proclaimed, "These guys were consummate professionals. Really nice people who did what they said they would - a rarity with contractors these days. They took care of everything and were very respectful of my home and family. They did an incredible job on my roof and did it on time. Another rarity. I had a great experience with Roper Roofing!" These reviews were taken from Roper Roofing & Solar's Google My Business listing where they are rated a very commendable 4.8 out of a possible 5 stars.
