Long Island sex crimes attorney Jason Bassett (https://jbassettlaw.com/practice-items/sex-crimes-lawyer/) releases a new article that explains the types of sex crimes under New York Law. The lawyer mentions that in New York, sex crimes are considered one of the most serious types of criminal charges a defendant can face.

According to the Long Island sex crimes attorney, ?Those who have been charged with a sex crime in New York will be prosecuted aggressively, even if the charges are based on weak, false, or exaggerated accusations. Being accused of a sex crime can leave someone with not only a ruined reputation but also facing severe consequences that can follow them for a lifetime.?

The lawyer says that sex crime is now a major area for law enforcement in the United States. More people are being charged with committing sex-related crimes. New York's prosecutors are aggressively seeking to convict anyone charged with a sexual crime. Criminal defense lawyers are standing up for their clients.

Attorney Jason Bassett explains that while sex crimes are typically prosecuted at the state level, they may become federal if the offense involves minors or crosses state lines.

In the article, attorney Bassett adds that anyone convicted of a sexual offense in New York must register as a sex offender. Different levels of sex offenders are assigned depending on the likelihood that an offender will repeat the same crime. The judge may also give a different designation to a sex offender. These include ?sexual predator?, ?sexually violent offender? and ?predicate sex offender?.

?Being charged with sex crimes can alter someone?s life forever. It is very important to seek the guidance of an experienced sexual assault defense attorney who may be able to help the defendant understand and navigate the complexities of the legal system,? the lawyer says.

Lastly, the Suffolk County sex crimes attorney emphasizes in the article that is it very important to have an aggressive and skilled lawyer who can help the defendant understand their rights. An experienced defense attorney may be able to help the defendant receive a lighter sentence, if not their freedom.
