December 15, 2022 -
The online SaaS property management review software platform has recently launched the letting agent and estate agency software category, providing crisp and useful reviews on leading tools in the real estate industry.

The one thing that every real estate professional has in common is that they all have the same needs, including streamlining day-to-day operations to increase efficiency, save time and better manage their clients/properties. There are a number of tools that can help them do just that by automating their everyday monotonous tasks, managing contacts, booking and organizing client appointments, preparing marketing plans, managing listings, sending invoices and receipts, collecting payments, entering data into databases and much more.

But with so many different products available, it can be difficult for professionals to find the right tool to suit their needs such as using software for managing rental properties. So to help them make better-informed decisions, Real Estate & Property Management Pro, the leading online software comparison platform in Australia, announced the launch of its new letting agent and estate agency software category.

"Real Estate Pro helped us get insights from other people in our industry to make a better, more informed decision," says Josh D (customer).

With thousands of property professionals using the company's online platform, Real Estate SEO Pro is now able to provide a more precise comparison of software for real estate agents, letting agents, online software, and property managers. Professionals can also find tools that have software integration capabilities like SalesForce that integrates with everyday usage tools such as QuickBooks, LinkedIn, G Suite and so on.

The new category will make it easier than ever for real estate professionals to find the right software that best suits their needs. The best part is that Real Estate & Property Management Pro doesn't charge a single penny from its users. They can browse through hundreds of software, read reviews and make purchases directly from vendors without paying anything to Real Estate Pro. The vendors are the ones who pay to have their products listed on the platform.

What's more, the vendors have to undergo a strict onboarding process involving an interview with the team. Plus, their reviews are shown on the platform with the good and the bad, which maintains full transparency. With tenant application form software being so important in for property managers, it is essential that this process is performed.

Every tool has some brief description, pricing, features and other aspects mentioned on its page that help you make the best decision. The page also shows the pros and cons of each tool, along with customer reviews and ratings, to ensure everything is available to potential customers before making a decision.

Users can also compare two similar tools to see how their features, pros/cons and pricing stack up against each other and which one is better for other needs. Another thing that's great about Real Estate & Property Management Pro is its blog section, where users can find information about different tools, industry research and answers to most asked questions.

Anyone looking to get the best recommendations and reviews on real estate agents and property managers can visit their website and start browsing tools for free.
