December 12, 2022 -

New Jersey cocaine possession lawyer Adam M. Lustberg (https://www.lustberglaw.com/drug-crimes/cocaine-possession-lawyer/) releases a new article that discusses the penalties for cocaine possession in New Jersey. The lawyer mentions that New Jersey has some of the harshest penalties in the nation for drug crimes. If someone is convicted of cocaine possession, it may have a significant impact on the accused?s life.

?As with marijuana, heroin, methamphetamine, and illegally possessed prescription drugs, the amount of cocaine you are charged with possessing affects the penalties you?ll receive if convicted. Possession of less than half an ounce of cocaine is considered ?possession? and is considered a third-degree felony crime in New Jersey, as classified by N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10,? the New Jersey cocaine possession lawyer says.

According to the firm's website, cocaine possession is a serious offense that can carry severe penalties, including incarceration and significant fines. Lustberg Law Offices understands the gravity of these charges and is dedicated to providing high-quality legal representation to those facing cocaine possession charges.
