NYC child custody lawyer Ryan Besinque (https://www.besinquelaw.com/how-does-a-court-decide-who-gets-custody-of-a-child/) releases a new article explaining child custody and visitation in NYC. The lawyer mentions child custody as one of the most contentious areas in a divorce. Parents want their children to be with them as much as possible. But it can be hard to meet their needs when there is a conflict between the parents.

According to the NYC child custody lawyer, "While each parent does have a critical say in child custody matters, especially when they can come together cooperatively to work together toward custodial terms, what the court will always consider, first and foremost, is the child's best interests. This is why it is critical to have the finest family law attorney possible when the guardianship of your children is at stake."

The court will consider a number of different factors when deciding who should be awarded custody of a child. Some of the key factors that will be taken into account include the child's relationship with each parent, the child's home environment, the child's physical and emotional needs, and the ability of each parent to provide for the child.

In order to determine the best interests of the child, the court will also consider the child's wishes, if the child is old enough to express a preference. The court may also appoint a guardian ad litem, who is an independent third party who will investigate the case and provide a recommendation to the court.

In addition to these factors, the court will also consider the parent's ability to communicate and cooperate with each other when making custody decisions. The court will prioritize arrangements that allow the child to have frequent and continuing contact with both parents unless there are compelling reasons to do otherwise.

Lastly, attorney Besinque emphasizes that it's very important to seek the help of an experienced child custody attorney in matters related to child custody and visitation. Having a skilled attorney may be able to help when it comes to creating agreements related to custody and help them when it comes to understand their rights and responsibilities.
