Mesa, Arizona - January 09, 2023 -
Dry Star Restoration, a company based in Mesa, AZ, that offers emergency water damage restoration in Phoenix and neighboring areas, wants to highlight the advantages of prompt water damage restoration. This kind of service is often needed when a home or building gets water where it should not be, such as when there is a flood due to heavy rains, sewage backup, a water pipe has burst open, and other similar incidents. This causes various valuable items in the home getting soaked in water, such as carpets and furniture. Furthermore, structural elements, especially those made of wood and similar materials get soaked in water and are weakened. In addition, with moisture there is also the possibility of mold and mildew growing in huge quantities, which could a be health risk for all residents of the home or building.

Richard Appel, owner of Dry Star Restoration, says, ?In the aftermath of a flooding incident in your home, you?ll want to get things back to normal as quickly as you can. By hiring a professional contractor who has experience with this type of rehabilitation work, you can minimize the structural and financial damage going forward. With a reliable water damage contractor that specializes in water damage restoration in Phoenix, your home will be restored as efficiently as possible.?

The flooring and the drywall are two particular areas that will have to be monitored closely. It is possible for dirty water to find its way into the material, particularly into the pore spaces, which makes it very difficult to dry them out. The expert water damage repair contractors will immediately evaluate the damage to ensure that important parts like the floors and walls have to be restored right away. In the event that the walls can be dried fast enough, they might be salvageable, which means a significant amount of savings.

Carpets will also need to be cleaned and dried as early as possible. In general, carpets and rugs will need to be replaced, especially after they have become waterlogged. The problem with these items is that they tend to absorb bad odors much more easily in contrast to the hard surfaces. And if dirty water from the rivers and even from sewage have soaked into the carpet, it would be advisable to simply tear it out and replace it.

It may also be possible that the water has caused damage to the HVAC system. Fortunately, Dry Star Restoration has experts in this particular field and are reliable in cleaning and drying air ducts, radiators, vents, and other vital components of the HVAC system. It is also important to check on the electrical outlets and wires.

With regards to the shelves and other furniture, it is possible to save them with the proper treatment plan. They will create an action plan that will include the salvaging of as many furniture items as much as possible. They have access to advanced tools and equipment for restoring furniture to their original state.
