Commercial Cleaning Industry Recovers From Pandemic

December 23, 2022

Sydney, New South Wales - December 23, 2022 -
Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the commercial cleaning industry in Sydney and NSW has struggled just like all other businesses and industries. Clean Group, a cleaning company, was unable to manage due to the fact that most Sydney offices and premises were closed during this period. However, things are now changing for the better.

The office cleaning industry was most affected by the pandemic in Australia. Suji Siv (CEO of Clean Group Sydney) stated that almost all businesses and commercial premises were closed during the lockdown. "In just a month, we lost around a third our routine cleaning customers. We weren't going to give up. We persevered through those difficult times and created a variety of new services, trained our staff, and updated our systems to keep up with industry needs.

Clean Group launched a COVID-19 disinfection service. This marked a major change. There was a high demand for disinfection cleaning in offices as well as commercial buildings such restaurants, schools, and hospitals. The demand for disinfection cleaning of offices and other commercial premises, such as restaurants, schools, hospitals, etc., increased sharply in the aftermath of the pandemic. This resulted in a substantial increase in the demand Clean Group's services. Many critical businesses, such as grocery shops, online delivery, hospitals and clinics, government offices, and other institutions, have been open since the COVID-19 lockdown. The company offered cleaning services even though COVID-19 was in effect, to ensure that these businesses continued to operate and their employees were safe.

These companies, particularly hospitals, required daily cleaning and disinfection, sometimes at odd hours. We had to work around the clock to meet the urgent disinfection needs of customers. We are glad to have had that experience because we know how difficult it is to be in touch with customers. We are in a better place than ever and have a larger team that offers commercial cleaning services round the clock.

Despite the fact that COVID cases are increasing across the country and many commercial buildings and offices remain vacant, there is a greater demand for business cleaning. Suji Siv explains that people are realizing the importance of keeping their properties clean and disinfected to prevent infection. We continue to be in high demand for commercial cleaning Sydney, and the surrounding suburbs. We are actually in better shape than we were before COVID.

Office workers in Sydney are returning to work and want to ensure that their clients and staff feel safe and comfortable. Companies are not only cleaning and disinfecting their offices by professionals, but they also take all safety precautions like asking employees to clean their hands before entering, asking them to wash their hands after leaving, maintaining social distance, using masks and so on.

Commercial premises are safe, and cleaning is a key part of keeping the environment clean and germ-free. We are happy to make our clients, their staff and visitors feel at ease when they return to work. Suji said that this is what I wanted from the start of my company.

Clean Group offers complete office cleaning Sydney services and disinfection to all types of businesses, including gyms, schools, childcare centers, strata buildings, warehouses and churches. In Sydney and NSW. Since the company's inception, it has more than 20 years of experience and can tailor-make commercial cleaning solutions to meet the needs of each client. They also offer both hourly and project cleaning at the best rates on the market.

We also offer disinfection services. All routine commercial cleaning services include standard disinfection for touchpoints and high traffic areas.

Expert commercial cleaners are needed as businesses across the state recover from the COVID-19-related pandemic. Clean Group, a commercial cleaning company, is now more important than ever. They are helping the industry recover by providing cleaning services during these difficult times.
