Businesses Get Burgled Too, Says Locked-Out Locksmiths In New Blog Post

London, UK, NOV 19, 2015 ? In order to educate London residents about sharing a flat with other people, Locked-out Locksmiths (www.lockedout-locksmiths.co.uk) has just published a new blog post authored by Brendan Connolly entitled 'An Experienced London Locksmith Protects Your Business from Burglars?.'

A Cardiff beauty salon owner harshly learned recently security is a must. They experienced a burglar who broke into the shop, and even had the nerve to count the money while he was still inside.

The article discusses doing a risk assessment. 'Scan the area, and note down all the possible passageways. Doors and windows are obvious choices for burglars, but these are not the only ones. Resourceful burglars may find a way to enter through the shop?s ventilation system. Even the skylight dome could also serve as an entry point.'

?Business owners can enlist the services of a respectable locksmith in London and have him or her strengthen and secure all possible access points,? states Connolly. ?If windows and doors have become flimsy due to wear and tear, have them replaced with new ones.?

The article relates that while there's nothing worse than being broken into, shop owners who don't manage inventory and have unorganized stock and equipment are hurt more when they can't give an accounting to police regarding what's missing.

It's always a good idea for business owners to assign a staff member to keep track of the equipment and stocks at all times, says Connolly. Do a weekly inventory to be sure.
