iPhone Repair Kit Celebrates First Birthday

November 29, 2015

November 29, 2015 -
A cell phone accessories business in Las Vegas, NV, is happy to announce the celebration the fact that their magnetized bits iPhone repair kit has turned one year old. The cell phone tool kit, which comes in 17 pieces, was first launched in the fall of 2014. Since then, every aspect of the kit has been improved to deliver the tool that is available today. All the parts are now magnetized and far stronger and more durable. The case is sturdier and the entire product is easier to use than it ever was before.

"When we first launched our product, it was really good and highly beneficial to people," says Stacie Standifer from Geeks N Gear. "However, we felt that improvements could be made, which is what we have been doing over the past year. We have listened to our customers and made sure that anything they felt didn't work quite right or could be better has been implemented. We really feel like our baby has grown up now."

The company is well-known for their highly-rated customer service. In fact, 97% of customers are extremely satisfied with the DIY phone tools and would recommend them to a friend. They feel this is a true testament to the quality of the products. Additionally, if something ever is wrong, the company offers a full lifetime warranty on all their tools.

"I've purchased a few cell phone repair kits in my days, and this one is by far the best," says B.D. Peters.

"Way better quality than others I've had, and the tools just seemed to fit their intended purpose (not some hack for a laptop repair). Overall I'm very pleased to add this toolkit to my arsenal of products to keep our home's mobile phones running in tip-top shape. You can't go wrong."

It is a known fact that around a quarter of all iPhones currently have a damaged or cracked screen. In most cases, the phones are out of warranty or not insured and people are unable to afford the expensive repairs. This is why Geeks N Gear wants to help people take the DIY approach by offering high quality repair tools.
