January 17, 2023

East Orange, New Jersey - January 17, 2023 -
Clinton Robinson Pro Tax Services, a tax preparation service in East Orange, New Jersey, is calling on local business owners, executives, and independent professionals to find out more about what it can do for them for their upcoming 2023 tax filings.

The 2023 tax season will start on Monday, January 23, 2023, and will see an estimated 170 million tax returns being filed before the deadline on April 18. As always, there are tweaks to the tax law this year that will change how individuals as well as businesses can claim deductions and save some of the money that they owe the IRS. For individuals, some of the notable changes include no above-the-line charitable deductions, possibly being eligible for the Premium Tax Credit, the return of some tax credits to 2019 levels, and many more. Select important changes in the tax law for businesses include modifications to Section 179 expensing, bonus depreciation, the Work Opportunity Tax Credit (WOTC), qualified business income deductions, and others.

Clinton Robinson talks about what taxpayers in East Orange, NJ, need to know about the upcoming tax season by saying, ?If you haven?t begun preparing for your tax returns, this is the time when you should be gathering all your documentation for 2022 including W-2 forms from your employers, 1099 forms from banks and other payers, 1099-K forms from third party payment networks, and others. This is even more crucial for businesses as the kind of industry they are operating in and the challenges they faced over the last fiscal year can have a tremendous impact on their tax liability. We recommend that you don?t go at it alone. Keeping up with the tax law is a full-time job in itself and trusting your tax preparation to the experts, such as my team here at Clinton Robinson Pro Tax Services, will ensure that you get the maximum possible benefit for your current situation. Our professional tax preparation services will help you focus on your business while we wrestle with your books to get you every possible commonly overlooked deduction that you qualify for.?
