New York child custody lawyer Martin Mohr (<https://www.newyorkfamilylawgroup.com/blog/ten-commandments-for-parents-in-custody-cases/>) releases a new article discussing ten important things for parents to remember in custody cases. The lawyer mentions that child custody and visitation cases are often very emotional and can cause a lot of tension between ex-spouses. If there are children involved, even a divorced couple may still have to interact with each other.

According to the New York City child custody lawyer ?Your relationship is now very different and those feelings are not exclusive to you. Studies have shown that children share the impact of separated families. Before you make any decisions, it is important to speak with a qualified New York family law attorney.?

Child custody cases can be emotionally and financially draining for parents, which is why it is important for them to be informed and prepared before entering the process. The New York Family Law Group has compiled a list of "Ten Commandments" for parents involved in custody cases to follow.

Attorney Martin Mohr explains that it is important for both parents to always be respectful of each other. Disrespecting or putting down the other parent can cause the child to be resentful. It is also important to always be generous in allowing the child to visit the other parent or their family on the other parent's side. This behavior can help the child grow in a more supportive environment.

In the article, attorney Mohr adds, "Never do things like recording conversations, posting to social media, or live stream with your children in order to enhance your legal position. This is likely to make things worse and this behavior stresses your child. It is also important to never ask your child about what goes on in the other parent's home. Children know when they are being used as spies and do not like it."

Finally, it is important for parents to remember that custody arrangements are not set in stone, and can be modified as the needs of the children change. If necessary, parents can seek legal assistance to modify their custody arrangements to better meet the needs of their children.

By following these "Ten Commandments," parents can approach the child custody process in New York with confidence and the knowledge that they are doing what is best for their children. The New York Family Law Group is committed to helping parents navigate this complex process and reach a custody arrangement that is in the best interests of their children.

Lastly, the lawyer emphasizes the importance of having a skilled child support attorney when dealing with matters such as child custody and visitation. A skilled lawyer may be able to help the parents understand their roles and responsibilities in the divorce and help them come to a favorable agreement.
