Brooklyn medical malpractice attorney Samantha Kucher (https://www.rrklawgroup.com/medical-malpractice-lawyer/) releases a new article that explains what constitutes medical malpractice in New York and who will be held liable. The lawyer mentions that it is a patient?s right to put their trust in a doctor or another healthcare provider. It is only necessary that they?ll expect professionalism and standard care. Medical malpractice is not just a mistake but it is a form of negligence.

?When a healthcare provider does not abide by established rules of care and procedures when they diagnose, or while treating, testing, or following up with a patient, those errors may lead to injuries, medical complications, or even death. In New York, this may be known as malpractice,? says the Brooklyn medical malpractice attorney.

The lawyer explains that medical malpractice or medical negligence refers to when a healthcare provider does not meet the standard and norms of their profession. This neglect may end up in injury, or even death. A victim of such negligence deserves to receive compensation for the injuries they suffered.

In the article, the lawyer also mentions that patients who came to a healthcare provider to be treated should not incur more injuries as a result of the visit. If someone ends up with more injuries because of negligence on the healthcare provider?s part, the victim may be able to file a medical malpractice lawsuit against the negligent medical provider.

Additionally, attorney Kucher says that a victim is usually left at a disadvantage because laws in the state of New York often protect the healthcare and insurance industry. Most people trust healthcare providers and doctors and it is only normal for them to expect the best treatment possible from such healthcare providers.

The accident lawyer also adds that people may think that medical malpractice is not a big deal. However, a study in 2016 by Johns Hopkins University reports that medical errors are the third leading cause of death in the United States.

Lastly, attorney Samantha Kucher emphasizes that it?s very important for a victim of medical malpractice to step out and report any kind of negligence that was done against them. Having a skilled lawyer may be able to help the victim receive the compensation they deserve.
