

Dandenong Conveyancer Conveys Interest in Operation in Other Australian States

January 09, 2023

January 09, 2023 -

VIC-based firm LEAD Conveyancing Dandenong said on Thursday its plans to offer its legal services in other parts of Australia to maximise its profit. The conveyancing company aimed to promote its business in all states of the country beginning in February this year, allowing its lawyers and paralegals to expand their expertise and have more learning opportunities in conveyancing matters. The firm's decision to operations expansion stemmed from the growing flexibility of every conveyancing company in Victoria. They noticed that most companies had served at least a few clients from all states and territories of the country, a thing they had not done since their business's inception. The firm said it is not about earning more money but, most importantly, allowing themselves to grow and give excellent services in any Australian region. Instead of confining their business in one state, they realised that exceeding their comfort zones was the best way to stay longer in the competition.

The fully-licensed company mentioned that helping persons, especially the ones belonging to underserviced communities eager to have their own homes, is one of the things they consider in deciding to commit to the plan. They believe that their business began out of its owner's compassion and empathy towards others, so they deem it right to continue until the end of 2023.

The firm's Solicitor and Legal Director, Trinh Thai, said in a statement that she always wanted to operate nationwide to improve their conveyancing knowledge and approach in every transaction. "I know this move is more than a hundred per cent beneficial for our profit and professional record. As we all are aware, every state has a different set of legal laws and rules. Having jurisdiction in all states and territories of the country will surely boost our sales and allow us to learn more about the profession we have been passionate about for many years."

Their current operations are in Victoria, Western Australia, Queensland and New South Wales, specifically in Dandenong, Geelong, Frankston, Melbourne, Brisbane, Gold Coast, Sunshine Coast, Logan, Sydney and Perth. This year, they decided to extend their operations in Australia's remaining states and territories, namely South Australia, Tasmania, Norther Territory and the Australia Capital Territory. They plan to execute it earlier than planned, but the volume of their current workload makes it impossible to do an early business expansion. The plan will be pursued in the first or second week of February.

LEAD Conveyancing is a conveyancing firm that has built a reputation for offering an enticing promo to its clients, one of which is its fixed-price legal services. Another unique promo it has for its customer is the $100 discount if its staff fail to answer clients' enquiry within a day, regardless if it is through phone, email or chat.
