Lisa Amundson says, ?We are honored to be recognized. Child support is one of the key issues involved in divorce cases. There are cases where spousal maintenance and child support, in some cases, can be ?reserved?. That simply means that to keep the divorce proceeding moving forward, any maintenance schedule is not dealt with until a later time and date. It typically requires additional legal support. If you are being presented with a proposed settlement where support will be reserved, make sure you check with an experienced family law attorney to ensure that is the best thing for your specific situation. If you are facing a child support or spousal maintenance issue and need help, take advantage of our free initial consultation.?

Aside from being a divorce lawyer, Lisa Amundson can also help as a domestic violence lawyer in the Twin Cities metropolitan area. She wants to point out that divorce and family law issues are usually both emotionally charged and complex, but in situations where domestic violence is involved, the situation can become even worse. Women who are in this kind of situation may feel that getting help can be intimidating, embarrassing, and even scary because of the possibility of further abuse to themselves and their children.

Lisa Amundson says, ?The fact is, one of the best first steps towards getting out of an abusive relationship is to speak with someone who has experience in dealing with similar situations. You spouse will very likely be threatening you that if you tell someone things will get worse, but it is actually the only way that you will make things better for you and your children. Ensuring the physical safety of you and your children has to be your first priority. If you feel that you are in immediate danger, call the police at once.?

Attorney Amundson has in-depth experience with regards to family problems where domestic violence is present.
