Bluffton, SC - Traveler's magazine 101 Things To Do, has created a list of engaging activities to experience at the Arts Center of Coastal Carolina. It is an independent, nonprofit theater that brings the Lowcountry everything inspirational and great in the arts. The award-winning regional arts center of Coastal Carolina aims to benefit the local community through professional performing and visual arts, cultural festivals, and educational outreach.

With a wide variety of performances, classes, and events, there are plenty of ways to discover the unique experiences the Arts Center offers. One way is through its theater?s series of performances. The Arts Center offers five plays each theatrical season in the 349-seat main stage Elizabeth Wallace Theater, including musicals and comedies. Every aspect of the performances, including the excellent directing, first-rate production design, and top-tier progressional actors, many of whom have performed on Broadway, is produced in-house, from inception to curtain call.

Visitors can enjoy great performances from well-known performers, including jazz musicians, comedians, modern music artists, illusionists, and international dance groups. In addition, the 101 Things To Do

Magazine says the Art Center of Coastal Carolina helps make arts education accessible for the community. The Arts Center also hosts year-round exhibitions of young people and instructional artwork in the Wood Community Room.
