GPS Tracker Shop, located in Sun City, CA, has announced that they have launched a brand new website. They have ensured that it is fully mobile friendly, enabling customers to access it on the go. The entire line of high-performance, award-winning GPS tracking devices are also listed on the newly designed website.

"GPS tracking devices are part of the modern era and it was about time that our shop followed suit," says Ryan Horban from GPS Tracker Shop. "We understand now how important it is to not have just a website, but one that is fully mobile responsive as well. In addition, we have realized that it is more than just showcasing the GPS products we have available. Providing detailed product descriptions, quality product photos and giving customers easy access to our support team available 24/7 was the goal with the new website and we feel confident we surpassed those expectations. We're so happy with the results and look forward to building even better relationships with our customers."

The website also includes a number of new features. One such feature is the security news blog. This blog is full of information that relates to GPS tracking, but also to things such as teen driving safety, senior care and more. Extensive technology news is also included, providing information about a wide array of ground-breaking strides in the live GPS tracker market as well as other segments of technology.

When GPS Tracker Shop decided to enter the modern era, they felt that they did not want to do it by halves. "We are now also available seven days per week in order to answer emails and sales calls," adds Ryan Horban. "This is on top of our other commitments to satisfactory customer service, including the fact that we offer a lifetime of technical support for free on every product that is purchased through our store."

Through the new website, the company has also introduced their new car tracking devices. Because GPS Tracker Shop is committed to improving overall driver safety and fleet management, they feel that these products are very important. They believe that they can help all drivers, particularly the young and the elderly, in remaining safe on the road. Additionally, these devices help to bring insurance premiums down.

GPS Tracker Shop encourages everybody to visit their new website and familiarize themselves with the new look and feel. They welcome feedback about its functionality as well as about the relevance of the posts on their technology news and security blog.
