

Denver Print Company Expands Apparel Printing Capabilities With New Direct-to-Garment Printer

February 20, 2023

February 20, 2023 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Denver Print Company today announced it has added a new PolyPrint TexJet Echo 2 direct-to-garment (DTG) printer that will dramatically improve its ability to quickly print custom t-shirts, hoodies, and other apparel items for customers. With this new equipment, DPC can now handle even shorter runs of smaller quantities with faster turnaround times than ever before possible.

The Echo 2 prints on both light and dark garments with resolutions up to 1440 dpi using water-based, and environmentally friendly, inkjet technology for vivid colors and photographic quality images that last longer without fading like traditional screen printing methods often do. In addition to faster production times, this newest DTG printer offers even better graphics quality due to its 3pl droplet size which is smaller than any competing printers currently on the market.

"This was an important acquisition for us," says David Cowell, owner and CEO of Denver Print Company, "In the past, our apparel orders had to be outsourced to other printers. As such, we couldn't handle some short-run orders very well and the turnaround time was often 3-4 weeks." He adds, "Now we can offer same-day service on small quantity orders which just wasn't possible before."

To celebrate this expansion in capabilities, DPC is offering $10 off any first order placed for printed apparel. A quote request can be requested through their website at www.denverprintcompany.com or by phone at 720-542-6105. Mention this press release to receive the discount.

Denver Print Company is a locally-owned and minority-owned print and sign shop that has been serving the Denver area since 2008. Located at 1045 8th Ave in Denver, DPC produces custom print products ranging from business cards to vehicle wraps and building signs.
