Phoenix Home Remodeling, a remodeling contractor based in Chandler, AZ, is happy to announce that they are offering kitchen remodeling in Ahwatukee, Arizona. They want to emphasize that unlike the general contractor, they use the design-build remodeling process, which is designed to reduce the stress that homeowners are often subjected to during a remodeling project.

One important reason is that Phoenix Home Remodeling makes sure first that all of the remodeling goals are feasible based on the budget, construction, and homeowner needs. This is in contrast to the regular contractor who will make the homeowner sign a construction agreement even before everything has been planned, designed, and checked.

Getting locked into a construction agreement with a general contractor without planning first is extremely risky. This risk is minimized by planning out everything in advance.

Jeremy Maher, one of the three founders of Phoenix Home Remodeling, says, ?We know that feeling. The kitchen is the heart of the home and where many memories are made. It's also a big investment, so you want to be sure you are working with a team of kitchen remodelers who can make your vision a reality. With years of experience in Ahwatukee kitchen remodeling, we have helped countless homeowners create their dream kitchens. We would love to help you too.

There is no team more trusted than Phoenix Home Remodeling when it comes to kitchen remodeling in Ahwatukee. We have over 20 years of experience helping homeowners create their dream kitchens.?

The Feasibility, Planning, and Design phase in the Phoenix Home Remodeling process makes sure that everything is planned and this greatly helps in having a more controlled budget before finally proceeding to the construction phase. And with Phoenix being a design-build firm, homeowners will be able to work with a team of production and design staff who will certainly comply with customer service standards.

Communication and transparency will be advantageous in that any potential problems can be discovered even before the construction begins. And the homeowner is able to save money because of the elimination of redesign fees and getting vital cost-saving advice during the planning, design, and construction process.

Another important advantage of a hiring a design-build remodel company is they are able to get the project completed in much less time because almost everything has been planned out in advance. As as result of the feasibility, planning, and design phase, they provide a detailed written description of all the tasks to be done during the project, including the total cost of the project.

The design- build company will be managing the project from start to finish, which means that they are able to work more efficiently, and the opportunity for things getting lost in translation is significantly reduced. And the closer connection and smoother workflow results into a more positive and supportive working environment. And the single point of responsibility means there will be no finger pointing.

There would be no need for the homeowner acting as a referee between the general contractor and the designers, architect, and subcontractors. If something is missing or wrong, the team is already positioned to resolve the issue.

Founded in 2017, Phoenix Home Remodeling has the mission of helping homeowners remodel without going through the usual problems that they encounter with general contractors who often make a mess of the home. In contrast to the general contractor, their remodeling process is based on the design-build business model, which offers a number of advantages over the process used by the general contractor.

These include the: minimization of homeowner risk; precise and controlled budget; lower cost; communication and transparency; accountability and continuity; detailed scope of work and pricing; higher quality; experienced guide with specialized expertise; single-source management/ teamwork; project management; and better process to decrease homeowner stress.
