Bluffton, SC - Off-Island Dental Care provides a variety of dental treatments, allowing people in South Carolina to pick and choose what's best for their oral health.

One option they offer is a Dental Bridge that can last up to 15 years. Off-Island Dental explains that a dental bridge is a replacement tooth (also known as pontic) that spans a gap in a patient's smile and is supported in place by two adjacent teeth or crowns called abutment teeth. They are affixed to the mouth, so only a dentist can take them out. However, they can be more expensive than dentures since they last longer.

The Bluffton dentist says there are several types of dental bridges. The most common and widely used among them is the traditional form. They are used when natural teeth surround a space on both sides of a missing tooth or gap. Another option is the Cantilever Bridge, a type wherein the pontic section of the bridge is only connected to a single abutment tooth.

For those with missing front teeth, a usually recommended option is a Resin-Bonded Bridge. And lastly, the Implant-Supported Bridge is similar to what is known as a "conventional fixed bridge," but rather than being cemented to the teeth. Implants support it.

The Bluffton SC Dentist helps patients determine which course of action is most suitable for their needs. "We will help you get your beautiful smile back and keep your dental health in check," they add.

Nonetheless, a visit to the dentist is the best way to figure out what to do about any teeth problem. Off-Island Dental will consider the patient's dental needs, lifestyle, and preferences in selecting the right dental service.
