February 27, 2023 -
Madera, CA ? Tree Service Madera, a local urban forestry provider and advocate in Madera, California, is partnering with several prominent celebrities and influencers for a campaign to raise awareness about the importance of urban forestry. The campaign, announced at a press conference by Tree Service Madera's CEO Edgar Doprisco, aims to spotlight urban trees' critical role in providing environmental benefits, improving air quality, reducing energy costs, and creating healthier communities.

Tree Service Madera's campaign will include educational programming, social media outreach, and promotional events held throughout the year to educate residents about the ecological significance of urban trees. They also plan to launch a series of fundraising initiatives supporting their mission. The funds raised during these events will expand Tree Service Madera's operations and enable them to plant more trees across the community.

The celebrities and influencers involved in the campaign are committed to helping Tree Service Madera reach their goal of increasing public awareness about urban forestry and encouraging people to take action in their communities. To this end, they will participate in interviews and appear at various local tree-planting events.

In addition, they have volunteered to promote tree conservation through digital content creation and encourage their followers to donate money or volunteer their time for reforestation efforts. By utilizing the power of celebrity influence, Tree Service Madera hopes their initiative will increase public understanding of urban forest benefits and inspire everyone to become stewards of the environment.

"Urban trees are an important part of our community, and we need to do more to protect them," said Mr. Doprisco. "We are thrilled to partner with some of the most influential voices in our area to help us spread this important message."

The campaign will involve public service announcements featuring key spokespeople supporting urban trees. Additionally, Tree Service Madera plans to host several events in neighborhoods throughout Madera to educate people on how to care for their own trees and create healthy, sustainable environments.

Tree Service Madera has partnered with local celebrities to promote their message, ranging from local rappers and singers to YouTube, Instagram, and Twitter influencers with millions of combined followers. Each of these partners will be featured in public service announcements, sharing their personal stories and experiences with urban forestry uniquely.

"I've always been passionate about the environment, and I'm so excited to be working with Tree Service Madera on this campaign," said Sarah Jones, a famous singer in Madera. "Urban trees are essential for creating livable cities, and we must do everything we can to protect them."

The campaign will also include a series of online videos and articles designed to further educate viewers about the importance of urban forestry. In addition, Tree Service Madera will partner with various media outlets to reach as many people as possible with their message.

Mr. Doprisco concluded the press conference by saying, "We believe that every person can make a difference in protecting and preserving our urban forests. We aim to empower everyone to take action and become stewards of their environment."
