December 09, 2015 -
Coronado, CA based Perfectly Vivid has recently launched their tactical flashlight, which has now been observed to be useful also as a self defense weapon. The flashlight has been designed to be multifunctional and to address a variety of different issues. The company is happy to see that people have noticed that it can be also be used for protecting themselves. Full details about the flashlight and its uses can be seen at http://perfectlyvivid.com/.

Founder of Perfectly Vivid Dr. Christopher Vogelmann says: "Unfortunately, we live in a dangerous world. People are rightly afraid of the dark, because you just don't know what is out there. This is why we're so happy to see that our tactical flashlight helps not only illuminate the way in the darkness, but helps protect people as well. Naturally, we hope nobody will have to actually use it in that manner, but it is good to know the option is there and that people feel safer."

The flashlight has been made using high quality aircraft grade aluminum. This makes it light weight, but incredibly strong at the same time. It is also designed to have an easy grip, so that if it does have to be used as a self defense weapon, people don't need to shift their grip first. The flashlight has been designed with survivalists in mind, which is why it is both durable and strong.

Perfectly Vivid also wants to encourage people to discuss their uses for the flashlight on their Facebook community. Their page can be accessed through https://www.facebook.com/perfectlyvivid/?fref=ts&ref=br_tf, and it is here that someone mentioned using the flashlight as a weapon for self-defense. "I was out late at night walking my dog when I heard something rustling," said the customer. "The dog had ran ahead and was off the lead, and something just didn't feel right. I used my flashlight to lighten up the bushes ahead and I saw someone moving inside. Calling my dog back, I raised the flashlight over my head. Luckily, the man inside the bushes ran off when he saw my dog coming, but I already felt safer and more in control thanks to the flashlight itself."
