Dr. Randy Wong of Honolulu Plastic Surgery has announced the availability of blepharoplasty services. Among the various plastic surgeons Honolulu residents can go to, Dr. Wong states that he is one of the very few who offer blepharoplasty.

"It's a common procedure, but not many surgeons perform it. Eyelid surgery can be delicate, which is why you would want someone with enough experience performing it," Dr. Wong states.

Blepharoplasty is a procedure where skin and fat are removed from the eyelids, which allows the eyes to look more open. This is a procedure that is chosen often for those seeking a younger looking appearance. Dr. Wong states that since he first began offering blepharoplasty Honolulu patients have started choosing this procedure.

"People generally want to look more youthful, and this is certainly a procedure that can help with that," the plastic surgeon states. "It's not only for looking younger, however."

Wong explains that some patients choose to have the procedure simply to enlarge the look and shape of their eyes. He states that patients of East Asian decent often lack folds in their eyelids, which make their eyes look smaller. Some patients choose blepharoplasty as a means of enlarging their eyes and making them look rounder, and have a more attractive shape. This helps not only the appearance, but also the function of the eyes as enlarging them provides a wider range of vision.

Dr. Wong urges patients who may be considering this surgery to seek the advice of a plastic surgeon who is specifically trained and experienced in the procedure. He says that while it is not considered a dangerous procedure, working around the eyes does carry some risks and patients should always ensure that they are visiting a surgeon who is certified and has experience in delicate treatments.

More about the clinic and Dr. Wong can be seen in his social media sites. He points out that patients who would like to learn more can schedule a consultation with the clinic where he will detail the surgery including cost, recovery time, and what the individual patient can expect from his or her results.
