Bling! Premier Lighting in Denver, CO, which provides outdoor lighting in Denver and neighboring areas, wants to point out that they can help make a home, business, or event stand out using their quality outdoor lighting. They offer a wide variety of outdoor lighting options, including: residential lighting; dock lighting; low voltage LED lighting; string lighting; deck outdoor living lighting; landscape lighting; accent lights; patio chandeliers; path lights; and accessibility lighting.

They can offer various kinds of services, depending on the purpose of the lighting project. These include: holiday lighting, landscape and patio lighting, permanent lighting, event lighting, and commercial lighting.

A spokesperson for Bling! in Denver says, "Whether you're entertaining in your backyard or getting your Denver Colorado home ready for the holidays, we have a lighting solution that will heighten the celebration and add a familiar warmth to your location. Every lighting project at Bling! follows a simple, guided process to ensure our customers get what they want. We aim to help the process flow smoothly from the first consultation to installation."

The Blingle process begins with a design consultation with the client, which can be in-person or virtual. One of the Blingle design specialists will work closely with the client to completely comprehend the type of lighting project that is envisioned and may offer some suggestions on how to achieve the desired results based on their knowledge and experience. After the completion of the consultation, the Blingle lighting designer will provide the client with digital images of how the home or property would look like after the outdoor lighting project has been completed. This allows the client to visualize how the home or building will look like, allowing them to make an informed decision on whether to pursue the project or make some modifications before starting it.

The second step in the Blingle Premier Lighting process is the lighting demonstration, where they will employ the digital images to provide a computer-based demonstration for the client. This ensures the client that the lighting project will truly accomplish the expected end result. Next, Blingle will submit a written proposal to the client. This proposal will include the price estimate and the various services they will be providing. The client can request for changes at this point in time.

Once the client has approved the written proposal, Blingle will draft a contract for the whole project and then schedule the installation. After this, they can start with the actual installation by the Blingle lighting experts. It is often requested that the client be present during the start of the installation to make sure they will be able to find all of the required electrical outlets for the lighting project. However, it is not necessary for the client to be present during the entire duration of the installation.

After the lighting installation, they will provide regular maintenance services. They also offer both workmanship and product warranties. And in the event that there is a problem with the installation, they will troubleshoot and fix the problem at no additional cost to the client. If the lighting project has a specific duration, they will return to the home or property to take down the installation after the duration of the project has been completed.

Blingle of Southwest Denver is managed by Jessi Nelson, who serves as the General Manager. She has lived in Denver since 2015 and had worked in the entertainment industry within the Colorado Convention Center for the past seven years. She uses her strong background in operations and management to ensure that Blingle of Southwest Denver is operating at the best possible level. She is assisted by Mike Stejskal as lighting designer and Branson Gray as lighting technician.
