March 30, 2023 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Gondelsheim Scoliosis Center, a physiotherapy clinic dedicated to providing effective and recognized treatment for scoliosis, has announced the expansion of its services to Melbourne. The clinic, located at 24 Elgar Rd Burwood VIC 3125, Australia, is equipped with state-of-the-art facilities and equipment, and the therapists are intensively trained in the three-dimensional scoliosis treatment method according to Katharina Schroth.

Scoliosis is a condition that affects the twisting and bending of the spine, causing a visible rib hump or lumbar bulge and a lack of mobility in the spine and ribs, leading to pain and incorrect loading. Without proper treatment, scoliosis can have a significant impact on the entire organism, impairing breathing and cardiac output, leading to reduced performance, and even impairing other internal organs.

According to Jordan Thomas, spokesperson for Gondelsheim Scoliosis Center, "Early detection and treatment of scoliosis is crucial. Without proper treatment, the deformities will inevitably worsen, and the clinical picture can worsen by 1 degree per year, depending on the findings. That is why the clinic offers effective and recognized treatment options to help correct spinal deformities and improve quality of life."

The therapists at Gondelsheim Scoliosis Center - Physiotherapy Melbourne are constantly educating themselves to stay up to date with the latest medical research. The clinic offers not only individual therapy with a doctor's prescription but also weekly therapy groups, guided training in their equipment room, and Pilates in small groups.

"The goal is to provide a comfortable and supportive environment to help patients overcome their scoliosis," said Jordan Thomas. "Gondelsheim Scoliosis Center understands the importance of early detection and treatment of scoliosis, and team members are committed to providing effective and recognized treatment options to help improve the lives of those affected by this condition."

Looking forward to the future, Jordan Thomas stated, "Team members are excited to expand the services to Melbourne and hope to help even more patients improve their quality of life through effective and recognized scoliosis treatment options. The therapists are committed to staying up to date with the latest medical research and continuing to educate themselves to provide the best possible care to patients."
