Beverly, MA based iLeasePro is making its lease tracking software available to clients across the nation. Those interested may contact the company's representatives today to sign up or request a more personalized demonstration.

Regardless of the industry in question, any business that leases real estate, vehicles or equipment needs to track these operations carefully, especially if they aim to comply with the current FASB ASC 842 Lease Accounting Standard (among others). iLeasePro's tracker consolidates a number of versatile features into a single platform, simplifying what was once an unduly complicated task, and the company is pleased to confirm that a business can swiftly deploy the software without having to commit to supplementary infrastructure (or even excessive planning to ensure integration). Further, the company will assist with the transfer, eliminating any hassle on the client's end.

When a business involved with leases reaches a certain level of growth, the need for better tracking capabilities becomes obvious. However, where this need may previously have been addressed manually, iLeasePro is able to utilize intelligent automation to produce a similar effect ? faster and with greater accuracy, a potent combination.

“Lease tracking software,” the company explains, “does exactly what you expect of it. It is a software package, or a suite of modules, that document and track all the leases in your business. A number of attributes may be documented as part of this process, but you will typically focus primarily on all the transactions that are part of those leases. Over time, as your familiarity with the platform grows, you may be able to use the attributes being tracked to make informed decisions about your business’ overall strategy and course.”

All the information gathered is also searchable with a few clicks, with parameters defined either by date or any of a number of other factors, such as the client’s name, the type of lease and so on. The company points out that the rules governing a transaction are also subject to change depending on the type of lease, so it is crucial for any software to track this as well (on an individual basis). iLeasePro does so, and it allows all search results to be shared quickly within a team, enabling rapid communication. This is useful for several reasons, not the least of which is the ability to create an ongoing audit trail.

Given how important audits (and overall data verification) are, the platform captures all data changes, with time stamps, to ensure that after-the-fact audits and reviews can be run at any time. Where deemed necessary, iLeasePro says reports can be archived for future references. This way, any potentially critical information is always within reach.

iLeasePro reiterates that the primary benefits of the platform are its relative speed and accuracy, but there are many other advantages that users should make use of as well. For instance, the platform essentially brings all a business’ data into a central location, making it available to all with the right level of access no matter where they may be located. A business’ entire team, for instance, may be granted web-enabled access at any time of day and throughout the year if so required. iLeasePro has invested heavily in security, however, so access can indeed be limited to those who are able to meet the platform’s user and password authentication checks.

Access need not be deployed equally across the business, either. The company says access to critical lease data, for instance, may be granted on a tiered basis (limiting it to those whose responsibilities entitle them to the information). In any case, any member of the team will be able to log in with their credentials as long as they are equipped with an internet connection and browser. Computers, laptops, tablets and even smartphones may be used for this purpose.

iLeasePro’s software is considered by many to be the top solution in the industry, and the team is always keen to demonstrate why. By getting in touch today, anyone can schedule a free demo and discover how this software can have a positive impact on their business.
