

Meet Positives Dating Website Remains Top Destination For Singles With Herpes

April 27, 2023

Chicago, Illinois - April 27, 2023 - PRESSADVANTAGE -

Meet Positives, a dating website for people with herpes and other incurable sexually transmitted infections, has managed to remain one of the number one options for people living with herpes. The site provides a safe, judgment-free environment where people living with herpes can meet others in similar circumstances. The site acts as both a dating site for those looking for love and a safe outlet for people looking to share their stories.

"Dating with herpes can be difficult, and at times, frightening," says Meet Positives. "Meeting others who suffer from the same conditions offers you peace of mind. Our members understand you, understand your fears and looking forward to feeling normal again. Don't let HSV1 or HSV2 stop you from meeting someone special. It's not your fault for being positive - you are still in control of your happiness, Meet Positives, and never have 'the talk' again."

The herpes dating site is also totally anonymous and secure. Meet Positives understands that people living with certain conditions may not always feel comfortable having their status be public knowledge. The site does all it can to keep users who do not wish to be known as anonymous as possible. Whatever information a user supplies is also 100% secure, thanks to Meet Positives' commitment to keeping its users' information safe.

In many ways, Meet Positives is one of the best ways for people with herpes and other conditions to learn about said conditions. Meet Positives says, "Learn more about your condition from others who have experienced the same feelings. Get the latest information about a possible cure for herpes, vaccination and treatment options. Read member herpes drug reviews, side effects and success stories. Meet others who understand what you are feeling and are also looking to move on with their lives."

According to the platforms, the stigma which people living with herpes face actually masks the fact that herpes is incredibly common. There are over 40 million people in the United States living with the condition, for instance, which means that 1 in 5 people live with the disease (with genital herpes being the most prevalent STI in recent years). "You are not alone," is the message Meet Positives strives to send out, and people with herpes are always welcome to connect with one of the millions of adults in the US who are living with the same condition.

While the site mainly focuses on herpes singles, Meet Positives also acts as a safe space for people with conditions like HIV and hepatitis. HIV in particular presents a challenge for people looking to date while living with the condition "mostly due to misinformation. Many are unaware of how exactly the virus is transmitted and what sort of treatment is available for HIV, leading them to continue to believe that it is a death sentence. While HIV was a deadly condition to have to live with decades ago, modern treatments allow people living with HIV to lead happy, healthy and full lives. Meet Positives is one of the few dating sites looking to help people with HIV find love by connecting them to others with HIV.

"Because uninfected people will not want to date HIV positive singles, the best solution is to be around people who share your situation," says Meet Positives. "Being around people who live with HIV will allow you to be yourself. You can also learn a lot from other people's stories and the information they have. Meetpositive.com is an online STD dating site that offers HIV positive singles a platform to share information and be in a community. You will build your confidence and outlook on life once you interact with people who understand your situation. HIV positive singles can enjoy a number of benefits when they become members of Meet Positives. One of the biggest benefits is finding a community that will teach you how to live a better life with HIV. The main goal of Meetpositive.com is to provide a platform for HIV positive singles to find love."
