Orange, California - May 01, 2023 -
Napolin Accident Injury Lawyer Orange County, a firm that provides a motorcycle accident lawyer Orange residents can depend on, has stressed the importance of getting medical treatment after an accident in a new blog post. Alexander D. Napolin, who heads the law firm, pointed out that getting treated by a doctor as soon as possible will benefit both the client?s health and well-being, as well as legal rights. This is because insurance companies will examine closely the victim?s medical records to determine how much compensation can be provided. In addition, going to the doctor shows that the victim is really hurt and requires help.

Furthermore, some injuries may not become apparent immediately and take some time to show up. The doctor can detect such injuries and begin treating them as quickly as possible before they become worse.

Alexander D. Napolin says, ?When you see a doctor, they'll make a record of your injuries and the treatment you need. These records are important because they help show that your injuries came from the accident. If you wait too long to see a doctor, it might be harder to prove that the accident caused your injuries.?

One example of an injury that is not immediately evident is a concussion where the accident victim usually feels fine right after the accident. However, after a few days, the victim may start to experience really bad headaches. If the victim did not visit the doctor right after the accident, it will be much harder to declare that the headaches were due to the accident. But if the victim had gone to the doctor as soon as possible, the medical records can be used to show the headaches were caused by the accident and the victim deserves a fair settlement. Meanwhile, when in need of an injured child lawyer Orange residents can also go to Napolin Accident Injury Lawyer Orange County.

Alexander D. Napolin also advises accident victims to comply with the doctor?s recommendations after getting a checkup. For instance, if the doctor recommends a particular therapy and/or taking some medication, it would be best to follow the advice to help the accident victim heal faster and demonstrate they are truly serious about getting better.

Alexander D. Napolin adds, ?When you follow your doctor's recommendations, it also shows that your injuries are severe. If you skip appointments or don't follow their advice, the insurance company might think your injuries aren't that bad. This could hurt your chances of getting a fair settlement.?

It is also important to ensure proper documentation and of all medical bills. All of the medical bills and records should be kept and organized. These will help when seeking for a fair settlement. Furthermore, it may also help for the victims to take notes on their injuries have been affecting their everyday life. For instance, they may find that they can no longer engage in a particular sports or leisure activity because of their injuries. Or they may be having problems sleeping properly. All of these can help in getting a fair settlement.

It is also important to be careful when talking to an insurance adjuster because they might use some of the statements made to counteract the victim?s claim when asking for a settlement. Alexander D. Napolin says, ?When you talk to the insurance adjuster, make sure to give them the information they need, like your name, contact information, and the date of the accident. But don't tell them details about your injuries or treatment unless your lawyer says it's okay. If you're not sure what to say, ask your parents or lawyer for help.?
