Residents of Las Vegas, Nevada, have recently welcomed a new therapy clinic. Five Star Therapist is now accepting patients and provides a wide range of services for emotional and mental health support. The therapist boasts of more than 10 years of experience in the field of mental health. A spokesperson for the new office states, "We have been working to get our office up and running, in an effort to reach out to those in distress."

The office will provide individual as well as couples, family, and group therapy sessions. The therapy services strongly focus on the individual person, urging each client to accept themselves for who they are. Couples and marriage therapy is also offered, helping couples to focus on their own individual needs and feelings, and urging the two to work together to overcome issues that may be putting a strain on their relationship.

"Marriage is one of the hardest things," the spokesperson states. "We will work with couples to help them overcome things that may threaten their relationships. Things like finances, work, raising children, and infidelity are all topics that we have experience in working through, and we hope to be able to help couples to come through their dark times and find happiness in their relationships once again."

The company has also launched a Twitter site, found at <https://twitter.com/5startherapy>, where they will offer guidance as well as more information about the newly launched office.

The therapist urges those with issues to contact the office to schedule an appointment. He states that in addition to traditional therapy for addiction and relationship issues, he can also help clients to work through things like weight issues. Although he is not a personal trainer, he does state that patients can benefit from learning to work through their own mental standpoint regarding their weight and physical fitness problems.
